

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

An overlay network is used to logically represent an underlying physical network. A network condition is monitored by a node in a target region of the network. If the network condition occurs, the node transmits a notification to a source node including location
5 information for nodes physically close in the physical network. The source node may select a routing node in the target region based on the location information.